Valuing Involvement

Strengthening Service User and Carer Involvement in NIMHE

Minimum Standards for Working with Diverse Groups and Communities

Recommendations for organising resources to support wider involvement

A Product of the Making a Real Difference Project
Overview

The Making a Real Difference Project was undertaken in direct response to the HASCAS review of service user and carer involvement in NIMHE. This resulted in the Making a Real Difference report.

The following document is designed to address recommendations made within the report. It explores the resource implications NIMHE and its staff will need to consider when planning to increase the diversity of people involved within all of its work programmes.

The resource implications paper begins to address how NIMHE can support the commitment to broaden the diversity of people involved and benefit fully from the expertise held within more marginalised groups and communities.

Who needs to consider the Resource Implications?

Regional Development Centre Directors
- All Directors should be aware of the potential implications of broadening the diversity of people groups and communities involved in the work of NIMHE.
- Directors should expect realistic resources to be built into headline management plans (HMP’s) to support involvement and should encourage their staff to do this.

New NIMHE Staff and Volunteers
- All new staff should use the resource implications paper to guide them in the development of all new work programmes.

Existing NIMHE Staff and Volunteers
- All existing staff should consider the resource implications of broadening the diversity of people involved in their work programmes.
- All existing staff should use the resource implications paper to guide them in the development of all new work programmes.

NIMHE Boards, Commissioners and Performance Managers (including external stakeholders)
- All NIMHE work programmes should be expected to highlight involvement resources within their Headline Management Plans.
- All NIMHE work programmes should provide regular feedback with regard to performance against the HMP’s. This should include financial updates regarding involvement.

The Minimum Standards and supporting documents were developed and written by Barbara Crosland on behalf of the Making a Real Difference Project.

The work was informed and overseen by the members of the West Midlands Making a Real Difference Work Group 4 Steering Group, comprising staff, service users and carer representation. Members were:

David Conlon    Simon Foster
Angela Hill     Tony Kirk
Alastair McIntyre    Jackie Rankin
Amanda Rose     Ranjit Senghera
Peter Woodhams

The process was informed by the expertise of the participants within the following groups and networks:

- Action 16 National Parental Mental Health Network
- Carers in Partnership (West Midlands)
- Users in Partnership (West Midlands)
- West Midlands Personality Disorder Network
- West Midlands Users in Partnership Older Person’s Group (including carer participants)
- West Midlands Users in Partnership Women’s Leads (including carer participants)

Specific Consultation sessions were held with the following groups:

- Black and Minority Ethnic Communities: Birmingham, 12th October 2006. Conference facilitated by the Catchafiya network- special thanks to Dominic Walker, Julie-Jaye Charles and all co- facilitators
- Primary Care: Birmingham, 29th November 2006. Focus group facilitated by Pen Mendonca
- Forensic services. Focus Group and interviews with residents of Ardenleigh Medium Secure unit- facilitated by Becky Derham from User Voice, Birmingham
- Prisons. November 8th and 10th 2006- Two focus groups with residents of HMP Hewell Grange, Worcestershire. Facilitated by Debbie Evans and colleagues from University College Worcester.
• Lesbian/ Gay/ Bisexual/ Transgender communities. Focus group and interviews with BI-GLAD (Birmingham Gays and Lesbians Against Depression)- facilitated by Noveed Zubair

Many individuals gave their time and expertise, including:

Rachel Heywood (Valuing People)
Sue Imlack (Solihull User Involvement worker)
Tricia Nicoll (Having A Voice)
Jeannette Partridge
Loris Tapper
Colin Gell

The Literature Review of Diversity in Mental Health Service User and Carer Involvement has been undertaken with the support of a range of groups and organisations, who will be formally credited when the report is published. However, particular thanks go to the main authors:

Dr JoyAnn Andrews (University of Staffordshire, Centre of Ageing and Mental Health)
Dr Jan Wallcraft (Independent user consultant/ previously Sainsbury Centre for Mental Health and NIMHE Experts by Experience Fellow)

The personal support of the following people to the process is also gratefully recorded:

Liam Gilfellon (Making A Real Difference Project Manager)
All members of the National Making a Real Difference Steering Group
All Making A Real Difference Work Group Leads
Ian McPherson and Sandra Hudson (CSIP West Midlands)

We would also like to say thank you to everyone who did not necessarily belong to any of the above groups but who also contributed to this document!

Introduction

The Making A Real Difference Report highlighted the need for NIMHE to improve the way it works with people from diverse communities and background in its service user and carer involvement activities.

All of the recommendations and products of the Making A Real Difference project are important.

The underlying principles of this document, based on the Minimum Standards for working with diverse groups and communities are the commitment to:

- Mainstream diversity of service user and carer involvement into NIMHE and CSIP's existing structures and activities
- Provide practical support to ensure different communities and groups have real influence across NIMHE at all levels
- Develop partnership working with external networks and organisations with experience of working with diverse communities and groups

Resource limitations were cited as a barrier to involving diverse groups and communities in several responses from national programmes and Regional Development Centres. Implementing the products from Making A Real Difference in a way that genuinely engages users and carers from all backgrounds means changing the way CSIP works as an organisation, which has major resource implications. These may include direct financial costs such as holding an event with a particular community or putting publicity material into different formats. There are also indirect costs such as staff time, admin support, training and development.

The Making A Real Difference products are being implemented in a climate of organisational change and financial pressures within CSIP. It is also recognised that CSIP has already committed significant resources to developing its service user and carer involvement programmes. Therefore, the focus of this paper is on making the most effective use of existing resources, with a more strategic focus on strengthening the involvement of diverse communities and groups, and a more rigorous evaluation of how well this is working.

It is also important to remember that many of the Minimum Standards for Involving Diverse Groups and Communities relate to the attitudes of CSIP staff and the culture of the organisation. Implementation of these recommendations is not necessarily about money.
Chapter 1 - Financial Implications of Strengthening Diversity of Service User and Carer Involvement

It is not possible to put exact costs on how much it will cost to implement the recommendations on diversity across the whole of the Making A Real Difference project. The paper ‘Resource Implications of Valuing Involvement’, gives a “guesstimate” of 7%-8% of an overall programme budget as necessary to support involvement. It is likely that these levels of investment will cover only the costs of “generic” involvement and that systematic efforts to increase diversity of involvement will add to this percentage. It may be that, to have any real impact on broadening engagement, resources, commitment and effort will need to be targeted at outreach work with those groups that have been historically most marginalised. Addressing this structural inequity in involvement may therefore have to be prioritised over other activities.

Working with diversity will have an ongoing and long term impact on resources. As ways of engaging previously excluded communities and groups become more effective, more service users and carers will become involved and costs may grow, particularly at RDC level. Investment could, in effect, be limitless. Ultimately, each RDC will have to make its own decisions on how it organises resources for involvement to secure the involvement of different communities.

Chapter 2 - Organising Resources Effectively

The following are suggestions for how CSIP and NIMHE could make best use of resources available to support diversity of service user and carer involvement.

2.1 Stronger Links With Other Work streams and Programmes

Service user and carer involvement does not exist in a separate “silo”. It is the responsibility of all NIMHE and CSIP staff to support involvement in their own work streams. This is especially true where other programme leads may have skills, experience and resources which can complement those of service user and carer leads. These may include NIMHE work streams, such as Personality Disorder, Women’s Mental Health and Race Equality. It also includes CSIP programmes such as Primary Care, Health and Criminal Justice, Valuing People and programmes for Younger and Older People. The “Having A Voice” project gives an opportunity to co-ordinate participation across CSIP.

Administration support should be available to support this collaboration. CSIP should encourage agreement for co-delivery and co-funding of involvement activities across programmes and work streams at national and regional level in its Headline Management Plans process.
2.2  Building Diversity Into the Whole Making A Real Difference Project

Engaging different groups and communities is not a stand alone activity. All the products of the Making A Real Difference Work Project are important to help NIMHE and CSIP implement the original HASCAS report recommendations. Appendix 1 gives an indication of what the diversity implications are for each of the products from the other work groups, and associated resource considerations. RDC and national programme plans for implementing Making A Real Difference should build diversity of involvement into all actions.

Working With Strengths

A self assessment of RDCs current engagement with diverse groups and communities showed different perceived strengths and weaknesses. There were some communities and groups, for example people with physical or sensory impairment, where all regions indicated difficulties. There were also examples, such as people from rural areas of people with personality disorder, where some regions have examples of positive practice whereas others do not. Although the self assessment return rate from national programmes was low similar variation in how well different groups and communities are included are apparent. Progress in working with people from diverse backgrounds will be measurable from the monitoring and evaluation processes.

RDCs and national programmes with identified strengths in working with groups and communities should share that expertise with others, for example, through dissemination in the Service User and Carer Leads Network, or establishing joint projects or reference groups.

Partnership With Other Organisations

NIMHE and CSIP should seek to develop partnerships with other organisations and networks that are seeking to strengthen diversity in service user and carer involvement. This may add value to NIMHE’s involvement activities and maximise resource potential in engaging with specific groups or communities. Joint working can be at local, regional and national level with service user and carer groups, voluntary organisations, or other statutory sector organisations.

In particular, opportunities for partnership working on diversity may exist with the new LINKS arrangements for patient and public involvement (PPI) and in the requirement for public sector organisations to involve stakeholders in implementation of the Equality Duty legislation, for which some providers are setting up reference groups consisting of people from relevant communities and backgrounds. Other organisations with a Health and Social Care focus which are working to improve diversity and equality of service user and carer involvement include Together, through its regional and national networks, SCIE through the Social Perspectives Network, and the “Shaping Out Lives” national user network.

Chapter 3 - Putting the Minimum Standards Into Practice

As part of their overall Action Plans for implementing all the Making A Real Difference products, RDCs and National Programmes need to develop a strategy which shows how they will improve the diversity of service user and carer involvement and build this into their service user and carer involvement operations policy. Different regions and work streams will do this in their own way, however, consideration when developing strategies and policy should be given to:

1. Statement of Principles and Values. This should reflect the minimum standards on supporting diversity of service user and carer involvement.

2. Establishing a Baseline. Self-assessment of how well different communities and groups are engaged with networks and programmes, for example, from questionnaires to members of networks, data on attendance at events.

3. Mapping of Resources. Staff and associate skills, existing links with community groups and potential for partnership working with other organisations.

4. Resource Availability. Commitment of budgets, staff and administration time.

5. Action Plans for Strengthening Diversity of Involvement. Procedures and processes for supporting people from different communities and groups to participate in:
   - Governance
   - Communication and information
   - Corporate policies and procedures
   - Work programmes
   - Service user and carer networks

6. Monitoring and Evaluation of policy/strategy. Arrangements for review.
